Changed Atmosphere

The joint statement, while vague, marked another of the psychological breakthroughs that have transformed the atmosphere of the Middle East since President Sadat went to Jerusalem in November.

[A bilateral communiqué issued after today's five hours of committee talks said that Gen. Weizman would be "flying home for consultations" and would return in a few days, the Associated Press reported.]

By listening courteously to the Israeli presentation and responding with counterproposals. Egypt has for the first time shown itself ready to take Israel's security concerns seriously, to accept them as genuine instead of dismissing them as a cover for Zionist territorial ambitions.

The old, ritual Egyptian response to Israeli expressions of concern about security—that they were trumped up to give Israel an excuse to keep the territories occupied in the 1967 war—was not-heard today after a meeting in which Israel's chief of staff, Gen-Mordechai Gur, made what Gen. Gamasy called "a presentation of Israel's security problem."

'Genuine Way' Gen. Weizmen said that "what Gur presented this morning was received in the genuine way that was delivered. Obviously there are things that are not accepted and things to be discussed. This is what we are here for."

British Firemen Accept Offer, Vote to End 2-Month Walkout

LONDON, Jan. 12 (UPI).— Britain's 25,000 striking firefighters voted today to end their two-month walkout and accept a 10-per-cent raise, only a third of the amount they sought.

Delegates representing the 53 regional fire brigades decided by an almost 3-to-1 margin to resume work Monday morning.

Fights, smoke bombs and several arrests marred the halloting at a conference in Bridlington, Yorkshire.

About 150 militant firemen who strived in chartered buses shouted "raitor" and "scab" at the Fire Brigades general-secretary. Terry Patry, as he entered the hall. Some tried to hit him but the police intervened.

Scuffles With Police An orange smoke bomb was thrown into the foyer before voting began and militants scuffled outside with police and firefighters in favor of returning to

Britain's first strike by firemen began Nov. 14 with a demand for a 30-per-cent raise—three times the government's anti-inflation limit for public employees. Prime Minister James Cal-

In a 112-page study that took 15 months, the commission urged Congress to raise the retirement age for workers in federally fund-ked programs from 65 to 70 and to grant federal executives the authority to switch such programs from one state or local agency to another, if the state or local administrators discriminate on the basis of age. About a fourth of the learning budget now goes into programs a lafor older people, including Social Medicare and pensions of various kinds.

By Seth S. King

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. Jan. 12 (NYT).-Vice-President Mondale promised Westerners again yesterday that the Carter administration would never pre-empt or interfere with their state and local rights to develop their water resources.

This assurance, received with some skepticism by the 500 persons gathered in this farming and mining center, has become the dominant theme of the Vice-President's five-day "listen and fearn" tour of seven Western

He said that Colorado's streams produce an excess of the state's water needs for only two months a year and during the other 10 do not yield enough.

"We need to expand our water storage capacity, or we cannot develop the coal and uranium resources this nation needs," Mr. Vanderhoof added.

Tuesday night before the Utah Legislature, Mr. Mondale also sought to reassure Westerners angered by the Carter administration's actions on water, the most emotionally charged issue in this Rocky Mountain region where Democrats face hard going in this year's congressional and gubernatorial elections

"I promise you that the President will never preempt nor interfere with your state and local water rights." Mr. Mondale said. Pledge Repeated

On his arrival here later Tuesday night, be repeated the pledge. But neither in earlier stops in New Mexico and Utah nor here did Mr. Mondale dis-close any details of President Carter's new water policy, which has been promised by mid-March. Secretary of the Interior Cecil Andrus, who is accompanying Mr. Mondale, sald earlier that no more federal water projects in the West would be placed on the

"hit list" for elimination. One of Mr. Carter's first acts in office last year was to call for the end of 18 dam and irrigation projects, 9 of which were in the West. Congress later restored funds for 8 of the 18, and the remainder, including 3 in Colorado, are still under study.

The National Guard, ordered President Anastasio Somoza to devote all its energies to finding the killers, announced yester-day it had arrested four men responsible for piotting and carrying out the murder. One of the shotguns used in the ambush had also been recorered, the National Guard said.

La Prensa's staff, prevented by guardsmen from leaving their office last night, could see buildings and cars burning in the streets. Guard spokesmen blamed the firebombings on terrorists.

The burning buildings included the customs headquarters, the Banco Centro Americano and the LISBON, Jan, 12 (AP),-Socialist and conservative leaders sald today that they have vir-tually completed an agreement to provide acting Premier Mario Soares with majority parliamentary support for a Socialist-dominated cabinet, and and Por-tugal's five-week government stalemate.

Observers speculated that an announcement of the agreement was imminent. The Socialists, seeking to balance opposing political forces, also were reported nearing a separate agreement with the Communists.

Although bedridden with the flu most of this week, Mr. Soares appeared ready to meet the Sunday deadline set by President Eanes for a solution to the crisis. Party sources said the accord with the Conservative Social Democratic Center would include economic recovery policy and would allocate a limited number of cabinet posts to conservatives.

nauts to join two others in the orbiting space station. Salvut-6, the multiple docking operation was no mean feat. In fact it was a major contribution to the use of space craft for long stays in the skies, for more extensive study of the vast environment in which our earth floats. And it was a first -a Soviet breakthrough.

Admittedly it was not nearly as dramatic as the original Soviet dash into space—the orbiting of Sputnik in October, 1957. That propelled the rocket into a Jules Verne atmosphere that opened magnificent vistas for men who had regarded space as a fantasy region into which man could only probe by sight and imagination.

But the first Sputnik to circle the earth carried trauma as well as drama. For the cold war was still very chill, and rockets could bear nuclear explosives as well as dogs or men. It could bring testruction as well as instruction to humanity. So, in a world where the nnclear fear arose not only from its devastating capabilities, but from the enmitles and rivalries of two great powers, Spntnik was not only a triumph for mankind but seemed a deadly threat.

In the United States, Sputnik presented an acute danger to many. It was also a cause of wounded pride—a nation which prided itself on its technological and scientific achievements had been left behind in a race for prestige. The political effects were wounding to the Eisenhower administration

When Soyuz-26 carried two Soviet astro- —they were to carry over into the "missile gap" issue raised so successfully during the 1960 campaign which brought the Democrats into power.

But Sputnik also presented a challenge to which the United States rose spectacularly, and which eventually brought an American to the first of man's landings on the moon. And what was far more important, this approach to Sputnik's success was, in time, to bring a realization of the folly of mere rivalry in space, and in nuclear development, and a recognition that all humanity had a common interest in space and the nuclear

So the United States and the Soviet Union have been cooperating in space. There is discussion now about how the Soviet Salyut, the American Skylsb and Space Shuttle can be coordinated and, with both nations admitting that nuclear competition could cause mutual suicide, the aura surrounding the latest Soviet feat is filled with far less fear, far more hope, than was the case two decades ago.

In fact, the best illustration of this change can be found in the fact that in much of the world an agreement among 15 nations exporting nuclear technology to diminish dangers of the military use of that material was given greater emphasis than the arrival of Soyuz-27 at Salyut-6. There are still very many threats of such military use. The nnclear peril persists. But in that respect 1978 offers far better promise than 1957-Soyuz than Sputnik.

An Editor Silenced

Pedro J. Chamorro Cardenal, the director of Nicaragua's only opposition newspaper, was gunned down with automatic weapons at the wheel of his car in Managua Tuesday. For 30 years, he had been an outspoken critic of the dynastic dictatorship of the Somoza family. He had been tried and imprisoned by courts-martial on several occasions for his opposition activities. Why he alone, among all the government's opponents, was allowed intermittently to express another view is something of a puzzle. But he did, with distinction, and was honored two months ago with Columbia University's Maria Moors Cabot prize for "distinguished journalistic contributions to the advancement of inter-American understanding." It is hard to believe that his opposition and the increasing recognition abroad which . that role afforded him, did not figure somehow in his murder.

cd last year when Congress debated but did not vote sanctions against Nicaragua. Here now is a chance for that regime to prove its asserted devotion to the protection of human rights and elementary liberties. The killers have not yet been identified. The Nicaraguan government has ordered an investigation, but it is to be conducted by the National Guard, long hostile to the murdered editor. The diligence with which the killers are pursued, the thoroughness with which their motives and mentors are uncovered. and the severity with which they are punished will show a lot. And so will the ability of even a few other voices of responsible opposition to be heard in that land.

Eritrea and Ogaden

Reports from Ethiopia suggest that government forces may be moving onto the offensive after a year of almost uninterrupted victories by forces fighting for the secession of Eritrea and the Somali-populated Ogaden. Fighting in both these regions could soon become even more ferocious and the fact that this is likely to be almost entirely due to a major resupply of the Ethiopian armed forces by the Soviet Union raises the question of how the United States and the other Western powers should react. -From the Financial Times (London).

African Success Story

One area of the world in which President Giscard d'Estaing has carried on Gaullist policies with the minimum of adjustment is the former French African empire. His visit to the Ivory Coast this week draws attention to what is generally agreed to be one of the success stories of postcolonial development. The Ivory Coast holds the African record for political stability. President Felix Houphouet-Boigny has not only been his country's head of state since it became independent in 1960. He has done so without having to confront any serious insurrection or attempt at a conp d'etat; and moreover he has been the dominant figure in his country's political life ever since the first election was held there in 1945.

-From the Times (London).

South African Press

There are ominous signs that in the intensifying battle between South Africa and her enemies the next major casualty will be the freedoms of that country's press . . . South Africa is moving into the dark territory between surveillance, which nearly all free countries (including our own) hold the right to exercise to some degree, and outright censorship of the kind which passes without comment in neighboring African republics.

Extreme measures against the South African government, such as the recent United Nations resolution calling for hostile broadcasting, increase the likelihood of that government invoking stronger measures against what is left of its free press. The further . consequences could well be severe limitations on international correspondents working in South Africa, eventually followed by the withdrawal of facilities from Sonth African correspondents working elsewhere in the world. The blanket of the dark would fall. -From the Daily Telegraph (London).

Pace of Peace

The pace which President Sadat has set has been too fast, but that does not mean he is running in the wrong direction. His direction is absolutely right. But if he and Mr. Begin are in a relay race against the rejectionist zealots, when is Mr. Begin going to take over the baton?

-From the Guardian (London).

The Carter Journey

President Carter's foreign excursion has been a bit like his administration ambitious, a bit confused, occasionally inept, optimistic, worthwhile and generally heading in the right direction. Its value has tended to be obscured by newsworthy incidents such as the mistranslations in Poland, the eavesdropping microphone in India, and the slighty loose wording of remarks in the Middle East. Bnt these are relatively minor accidents of a type to which President Carter's White House is prone wherever it is. They do not diminish the value of the trip. Before taking office. President Carter had travelled much less than most other recent Presidents-elect. He had done a great deal of intensive study but he had not made much direct contact with foreign peoples and places. Now he has at least made fleeting contact with a select few and has further trips in mind.

-From the Times (London).

Dangers of Abstract Dogma

By Jonathan Power

T ONDON.—Change, change, it has to come, but how, to whom, how far, how fast, how carefully?—the perennial question that surfaces with added urgency every few decades when the dislocations and disruptions in human society become too severe to be contained by the normal intercourse of men.

The late 1970s and 1980s look ou present evidence like being a period of maximum unrest. Industrial man is increasingly alienated from his work; the teeming poor of the Third World are losing their passivity; the ecosystems that since the world began have provided both the foundations and shock absorbers for man's onward material progress now appear finite; and perhaps most important, permissive affluent society has created a class of revolutionary, often violent, young dissidents.

Where to look for inspiration for ideas that might rescue us? In 19th century Russia? For most people that would be the last place to search. It is widely considered to be an age filled with intellectuals who borrowed themes from the West but did not understand them and who "In their fanatical passion for extreme ideologies rushed, like Dostoevski's devils, to blind selfdestruction, dragging their country and subsequently much of

Right Government

Bertrand Russell once commented that, appalling though Bolshevik despotism was, it seemed the right sort of government da. "If you ask yourself how Dostoevski's characters should be governed you will understand." he told Lady Ottoline

There is however a dissenting interpretation of the "devils," the radical intelligentsia, of Dostoevski's novel. For that we are thankful to Issiah Berlin who over thirty years has attempted to shape a different percention Many of his essays, now long out of print, are brought together in a new volume, "Russian Think-Here we have Berlin brilliantly justifying his belief that Turgeney, Tolstoy, Herzen and Belinsky produced prophetic insights into the giant problems of our own time.

In her introduction, Aileen Kelly notes that Berlin shows how "the failure of the European revolutions in 1848 had the effect in Russia [of producing among] the intelligentsis a profound distrust of Western radical ideologies and their social nostrums. For the most morally sensitive among the intelligentsia, intellectual consistency implied above all a process which they called 'suffering through' the truth, the stripping off, through a painful process of inner liberation, of all the comforting illusions and half truths which had traditionally concealed or justified forms of social and

Assumptions

"This led to a critique, with far reaching implications, of the unquestioned assumptions at the se of everyday social and political conduct." So Herzen is not just a radical with a utopian faith in an archaic form of socialism. He is also the author of some of the most profound modern writings on the subject of liberty.

Tolstoy is not just the great simplifier, the great moralist attempting to find through the Sermon on the Mount and the behavior of the Russian peasant the one irreducible truth. "He could not swim with the tide without being drawn irresistibly below the surface to investigate the darker depth below; and he could not avoid seeing what he saw and doubting even that; hecould not close his eyes but not forget that he was doing so; and he died in agony, oppressed by the burden of his intellectual fallibility and his sense of perpetual moral error, the greatest of those who can neither recon-

the predicament of the radical clie, nor leave imreconciled, the conflict of what there is and what there ought to be." Intellectual humility has never had a greater teacher. Turgenev was not just the writer of lyrical prose. His sportsman's sketches on the serf system had as great an effect in Russia as "Uncle Tom's Cabin" did in America. Yet be offered no clear way out: only gradualism and reason. He did not preach or attempt to bind his vision upon the reader. Turgency perceived the hollowness of the certainties invoked by liberals to justify the injustices of the existing order, or by radicals to justify its merciless de-struction. He thus anticipated humanism of our century."

This is the recipe for our age: a little more humility, a little more calm, and a preparedness to accept that radical change is not an intellectual abstraction easily organized through a political dogma. This is not to say that an enthusiasm for ideas is a failing or a vice. It is not. Neither the urge for far reaching change. But change must only be pursued if its protagonists are aware that each historical situation is unique and that the people contained within it, however big the problem, remain individuals. Anything less is a short-

Chris Matthews From Rome:

Italian violence getting to be game everyone can play.

ROME-Gloomy days are here again. This week's cover on L'Expresso reads 'Italy's Civil In Corriere Della Sera, spoiologist Francesco Alberoni addresses himself to the same theme, arguing that the time to start justling for your seat on the first helicopter out of town is when violence has become accepted by the majority as a normal, unremarkable fact of life.

And that's just the way things are going. Four dead since New Year's Eve. who knows how many wounded. Bombs blasting off all over the country like revelers' firecreckers. Pitched battles between neo-Fascists and leftist extremists, battation-strength engagements between extremists and police with both sides letting off sufficient ammunition to decimate the Red Army.

I really don't want to dramatize the situation. I still rate my chances of living to a ripc old age higher in Rome than London or New York, and enjoying myself considerably more in the process. But violence is getting uncon-fortably commonplace. For they don't make political speeches anymore—just open up with auto-matic weapons. Recently, a friend staying with me was foolish enough to leave the house in the middle of a demonstration. She had to check whether the car had been firebombed yet or not. Well, naturally, as soon as she'd stuck her nose out of the front door, a couple of cops let off at least three shots on her from 20 yards down the road. Rotten marksmen, both of them. Juckily. If being used for target practice by riot police is the price one has to pay for living in what remains the most civilized capital in Europe, that's quite all right with me. What's a few bullet holes in the wall next to you compared with the pleasures of eating freshly cooked pasta in an open-air restaurant on the Tiber in early January. But what's starting to worry people, myself included, is that the quality of violence is changing. The Red Brigades and

Reckoning in Namibia

By Anthony Lewis

NEW YORK-The United States and its Western allies may soon be in enother diplomatic confrontation with South Africa. This time the issue will be Namibla (South-West Africa), the large, mineral-rich country that South Africa has administered for years but has been told by the United Nations to leave. Last winter the United States, Canada, Britain, France and West Germany headed off a UN demarche by saying they would try Namibia, Representatives of the five have held many sessions with Prime Minister John Vorster and Foreign Minister R.F. Botha of South Africa. At times agree-ment has seemed close. But now informed diplomats say the prospects are gloomy.

Boths is due to come to New York next weekend for one more round of talks with the five. But he is expected to bring with him, too, a form of ultimatum: Unless an internationally acceptshie plan is worked out soon, South Africa will proceed with an "internal solution." It will create an independent Namibia on its own terms. For South Africa to let so of the territory, after years of legal and political defiance, sounds like a welcome breakthrough. Botha will argue that the world should be contented. But a look at tha kind of state South Africa would probably declare independent discloses a very curious creature. Namibia, in the prospective

South African plan, would be a state formally divided along ethnic lines. The country's meager

The plan is reminiscent of the "liberum veto"—the rule of unanimity-that crippled the government of Poland in the 17th and 18th centuries. It would be extremely hard, if not impossible, for Namibia to act as a nation. The country would really be a tribal confederation. There would be almost no chance of changing the property and other laws that assure white dominance. South Africa has even moved to divide the proposed new state's armed forces along ethnic lines. It is creating "regional forces," really tribal armies. Such a system would leave Namibia without an effective national army and totally dominated by its powerful neighbor, South Africa

If South Africa does to shead with its "internal solution," it will promise free elections for a new Namibian government. It will doubtless invite UN observers and perticipation by the South-West Africa People's Organiza tion (SWAPO), the nationalist group that has been struggling for independence, But Botha knows that neither SWAPO nor the UN would be likely to take part in such an election.

It would be an election prem ised on an ethnic consist that SWAPO rejects, one involving no political figures with a real national base. And SWAPO has reason to wonder about South African promises of political freedom. Just last month all the party leaders inside Namibia were suddenly arrested, and SWAPO meetings were broken up

Threat of Intervention

The five Western powers think that South Africa's solution would not really solve the Namibian problem—that guerrilla war would go on and outside intervention threaten. But the five are finding it very difficult to achieve the better alternative, an internationally acceptable settlement. That requires agreement between South Africa and SWAPO, who fiercely dislike and distrust each

If Vorster is a tough customer in diplomatic negotiations, SWAPO can also be inflexible. Its leader, Sam Nujoma, travels constantly and is often hard to find. He was invited to New York next week so the five could talk separately with him and Botha. But at this point it is uncertain that he will come or indeed that the meetings will be held.

Despite the difficulties, the five have in fact made a great deal of progress in the last year, South Africa has accepted the idea of independence, universal suffrage and a UN role. SWAPO has given up the claim that it should just take over without a vote; it has accepted elections and a transition under the present administrative structure.

The chief remaining points of difference concern conditions for the election and the withdrawal of South African troops, Vorster wants to keep 3,000 men in Namibia, many of them near the Angolan border in population centers where they might influence the election. So far SWAPO is demanding that all be with-

Ironically, the drought could lead to a long-overdue restructuring of the beef industry, which has suffered for many years from having too many cattle and not enough markets a situation that often drove prices below the break-even level for ranchers,

The general secretary of Queensland's Graziers' Association, Arthur Stephenson, has suggested that the drought be used as an opportunity to reduce the number of cattle.

"Drought is a terrible way to 5 get over the oversupply situation but it will belp the industry overall to become more economic," he said.

City dwellers are already feeling the effects of the drought, with mest prices expected to rise by up to $20 a nound in coming weeks. There are also fears that reduced milk production could lead to shortages of hy-products like yoghurt and cheese.

It quoted the South African Trade Organization as saying business with Mozambique was picking up and that local exporters were re-establishing themselves in the Mozembican market. Getting export credit was no problem, it reported, adding that the Mozambican government was keeping an account with the Bank of Lisbon in Johannesburg.

Hard Currency

Western economists here estimate that Mozambican imports from South Africa may increase from 17 per cent of the country's total imports in 1976, to about 25 per cent last year. Private businessmen here say they have no trouble getting permission and hard currency from the government to buy spare parts and other essentials from South Africa to keep their factories running.

The quantity of South African exports and imports passing through the reviving part of Ma-puto also is reported to be climbing back slowly toward its preindependence level of 4.4 million tons a year. That country's electricity supply commission will initially receive 750 megawatts from Cabora Bassa, or 5 per cent of its total capacity last year. By 1979, the amount will rise to 1,760 megawatts, more than 10 per cent of its energy. It will be some time, however, before Mozambique gets anything out of this deal, arranged been South Africa and an international consortium before Mo-zambican independence, All the earnings go to the banks and companies that put up the more than $400 million needed to finance the dam and power station.

Lady Spencer-Churchill, widow of Britain's leader in World War II, died a month ago. Her three executors, including her daughter, Lady Soames, said they "felt it right to announce" the destruction of the paint-Mr. Sutherland, one of the world's best-known artists, said last night that this was "without question an act of vandalism." The painting was commissioned by the houses of Parliament and presented to Sir Winston as an 80th-birthday present. It caused much controversy then, Lord Hailsham said at its unveiling in 1954. "It's disgusting it's ill-mannered, it's terrible." It was never dis-

HONG KONG, Jan. 12.-After dropping some of Mao Tae-tung's revolutionary policies, China's new leaders have taken "de-Machation" a step further by dislodging the late chairman from his place of honor on the front page of the People's Daily

The top-right corner of the page has traditionally hean reserved for quotations from Mao or, on cccasion, Marx or Lenin. But twice in the last week the quotation box has been dropped in fevor of large photographs of Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, said to be Mao's choice as his successor. Later in the week, Mr Hun again supplanted the quotes from Mao, with a photograph showing him welcoming to Peking the leader of Australia's tiny Marrist-Leninist party. The same day, an entire page inside the paper was used for color reproductions of art works celebrating Mr. Hua's long career as an obscure administrator in Hunan Province. THEATER IN PARIS_

'Modern' Racine Behind the Times

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss

DARIS, Jan. 12 (IHT).-Jean-Plerre Miquel, responsible for the latest presentation of Racine's "Britannicus" at the Comédie-Française, apparently regards himself as being avantgarde, but he is actually a hundred years behind the times.

He has taken the great 17thcentury tragedy of imperial Rome -of Nero's wresting the ruling power from his mother, Agrippina -and transformed it less into something burningly topical than into a lackluster 19th-century shocker. It now suggests an Au-gier problem play. It also appears, from his grotesque direction, that he has been studying some preposterous movies about the Nazis-probably "The Damned," "The Serpent's Egg" and others of their orderand has been so impressed by them that he has taken over their costuming and tone. In the oldfashioned manner of Victorian novelists, he has added an explanatory sublitle to the litle: "La Prise du Pouvoir." Why not in true Bertha M. Clay style: "Nero's First False Step."

When the curtain rises we behold Agrippine and Alhine clad as Ibsen actresses whispering the situation, Jean-Luc Boutté as Nero sports a Dracula cape; Jacques Serevs as Narcisse might be a luxury hotel receptionist; Francis Huster's Britannicus is in a Prince Albert suit of the diplomatic corps; and Jean-François Remi, as Burrhus, looks as though he were on his way to the Versailles Peace Treaty con-

Denise Gence's Agrippine not to be outdone in this retro circus, resurrects an innovation of Antoine's Théatre-Libre and turns her head from the audience as she moans on a flight of stairs, reciting her lines to the stagehands, Ludmila Mikael a brilliant young actress, is Junie, Britannicus's bride to be, a victim of the emperor's whim, but neither she nor her competent companions can relieve the monotony of the ill-advised evening. At the Lucemaire, Laurent Terateff is presenting a double ball of Edward Afbee plays. The first is the well-known "Zoo Story," which has enjoyed uninterrupted success since its premiere in Berlin in 1960. It remains its familiarity notwithstanding—a gripping short play. Laurent Terzieff plays the aggressive neurotic who bedevils an innocent passer-by in Centra! Park, and Yves Gasc is his prey.

The second one-acter, "Boite Mao Bolte," a more recent Albee exercise in brief form, is exceedambiguous. An elderly char-woman repeatedly recites "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse" at stage left, while at stage right an actor with smirking Mao make-up smugly delivers "thoughts." At stage center in ship deck chair a socialite globe-trotter complains about the state of the world to a silent co-passenger.

This goes on for an hour to no discernible conclusion and then concludes. The Albee allegory seems almost stabbornly to avoid ommunication—and perhaps this is its point. Terzieff has directed his quartet of players— Pascale de Boysson, Muni, Ganil Ratib and Yves Gasc-to be very earnest about it, but they fail to reveal the meaning.

Oberammergan Voters Oppose Staging of New Passion Play

OBERAMMERCAU, West Germany, Jan. 12 (AP),-The majority of eligible voters in this Bavarian village opposes introduction of a new Passion Play, Oberammergan Mayor Ernst Zwink said today.

Almost two thirds voted Dec. 18 for what some consider an anti-Semitic version of their centuries-old Passion Play.

In doing so, they rejected the revised version of a 227-yearold script by Father Ferdinand Rosner, edited this year to remove some passages. The new Rosner version was staged experimentally six times last summer at a cost of about $500,000. Mr. Zwink said that 2,496 eligible persons went to the polls. After analyzing the results, the organizers found that 1,506, or almost 60 per cent, had opted for the Daisinger version of the

About 34 per cent of those asked voted for the revised Rosner version, Mr. Zwink said. Another 6 per cent had no opinion or rejected the Passion Play altogether, he said. A final decision on what version the village will play in 1980 will come later this year, Mr. Zwink said. He added that it was unlikely that a decision would be made before the March municipal elections.

The majority of Oberammergau councillors earlier opted for the revised Rosner version, causing a heated debate. They then ordered the public opinion poll.

Met Acquires 'Find of the Century'

By Grace Glueck

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (NYT).-The Metropolitan Museum of Art has revealed itself as the actual buyer of a rare 9th-century ivory plaque, sold to a London dealer by Sotheby's last month for a record auction price of £255,000 ($470,000). The plaque, thought by its former owner to be simply an interestingly carvpiece of old wood, is halled by the museum as "one of the major art finds of the century" (IHT, Ang. 20).

Depicting St. John the Evangelist holding a manuscript of his Gospel, the plaque belongs to the "Ada" group of Carolingian ivo-ries, those believed by scholars to have been carved in the palace of Charlemagne in Aschen and named for the Abbess Ada, supposedly a sister of the emperor.

A statement by Philippe de Mentebello, acting director of the Met, that the plaque is not only "one of the most important works of art" to enter the museum's collection, "but also one of the major art finds of the century," is supported by John Beckwith, keeper of architecture and sculpture at London's Victoria and Albert Museum. "We simply didn't have the cash to bid on it," he said.

Bolt From Blue Neil Stratford, keeper of the department of medieval and later antiquities at the British Museum, said, "It's a very remarkable, very important and very interest ing object, and it came like a bolt from the blue." Xt is understood that the British Museum was the underbidder on the work, which despite official reluctance to see it leave England had to be granted an export license by the British government because it had been in the country for less than

The small piece, only 7 1/2 inches high and 3 5/8 inches wide, was totally unknown to medieval art specialists and is not recorded in the definitive book on Carolingian ivories, published by German scholar, Adolf Goldschmidt, in Berlin in 1914. It was taken to Sotheby's in London last June by a woman who had inherited it from her father, a "modest" dealer in Prance who had come to England shortly after World War II.

No Idea According to Sotheby's spokesmen, the woman had no idea of the value or origins of the work. The auction house refuses to divulge her name, saying she has asked for anonymity.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Thyssen Bids for Budd

Thyssen, the West German steel company has offered to accurre Budd, a U.S. auto components firm, through a merger at a price of $34 a share. Budd has approximately 7.23 million shares outstanding, putting the value of the offer at 4245.8 million. Budd builds auto body components, chassis, frames, wheel and brake products and rail cars. In 1976, it earned $27.2 million, or $4.20 per primary share, on sales of $1.06 billion. A Thyssen spokesman says the acquisition would provid Thyssen with a broader product range. The kesman declined to name the U.S. subsidiary of Thyssen that would actually be involved in the merger. Thyssen had said in November that it would probably cut its cash dividend for fiscal 1977 ended Sept. 30 to 5.50 deutsche marks against 7 DM tha previous year. However, a final decision on the dividend policy will not be taken by the supervisory board until the end of January. In November, Thyssen also reported that sales declined 2.9 per cent in fiscal 1977 to 19.8 billion

Oilfield's Reserves Revised

Thomson Organisation Ltd. reports that recoverable of reserves from the Piper offield in the British sector of the North Sea have been revised downward to 616 million barrels from the previous estimate of 695 million barrels Reserves of the Claymore field are now put at 404 million barrels compared with 410 million barels previously estimated. Thomson North Sea

Ltd., a unit of Thomson Oganization, has a 20per-cent interest in both the fields. A unit of Occidental Petroleum is operator for the fields. Condental has a 36.5-per-cent interest in the fields, Getty Oil has a 23.5-per-cent interest and Allied Chemical holds 20 per cent.

Humana Gets 51.6% of Medicorp Humana Inc., a hospital care firm, has received about 9.38 million shares of American Medicorp, which operates general hospitals. Humana says it will buy 5.7 million of the shares on a pro rate basis, giving it a 51.6-per-cent share of the company. Humana had offered to buy 5.7 million shares at $15 cash plus half of a new $2.50 cumulative preferred Firmana share for each Medicorp share.

R.J. Reynolds Sees Profits Rising

R.J. Reynolds Industries expects 1977 net earnings to range between $8.15 and $8.25 a fully diluted share, including a non-recurring gain of $1.07 a share from its nationalized petroleum operations in Kuwait. In 1976, the company earned $6.89 a fully diluted share. Reynolds believes 1978 will be "another year of progress," with capital expenditures of more than $600 million, almost twice the 1977 level. R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. increased its market share modestly in an "intensely competitive year," the company says, adding that it continued its strong per formance in the low-tar category, the fastest growing industry sector.

Transnational Firms Said to Hurt Brazil

GENEVA. Jan. 12 (AP) .-Brazil's electrical equipment in-dustry has been "decimated systematically" by a cartel of foreign transnational corporations, says a study published by the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development today. It says the transnationals gained control through market sharing and price fixing pacts, forcing out Brazilian competitors and making the developing na-tion dependent on imported electrical equipment from the transnationals' huge production plants

Thus, the study says, development of Brazil's electrical equipment industry that was set up by the mid-1960s has been ef-fectively impeded and current Brazilian efforts to redress the situation promised no long-term

The study says the transmationals already owned about 61 per cent of total assets of Brazil's electrical machinery industry in 1966 and increased that share to 68 per cent in 1972.

While 65 to 70 per cent of the radio and television market was supplied by Brazilian manufacturers in the mid-1960s, their share dropped to 20 per cent by The study says the transna-

Slump Ends Stock Rally

Fed's Dollar Action Said to Help Market

NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (IET) .-A seven-day stock market slump ended today as investors snapped up some bargains in a generally more investment nlimate. Trading was active.

But the rally, termed technical by analysis, was unimpressive, despite better news on the dollar in foreign exchange markets and improved unemployment and inflation figures.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed ahead 2.25 points to 778.16. It was up 4.59 at 3 p.m. Some 745 issues gained with about 590 lower, and volume totaled 23.73 million shares compared with 22.8 million yesterday. Analysts said the market moved higher on a combination of factors, including the Federal Re-vance sharply in London. But basically, analysts said, investors continue to express concern over the energy outlook and the fate of the conservation bill

Price Index Rises in U.S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12 (AP). -Sharply rising food coats pushed up the government's new index of wholesale prices by 0.7 per cent last month, nearly twice the November incresse, the government reported today.

Food prices jumped 1.5 per cent in December, marking the biggest riss in seven months and signal-ing higher prices in the coming menths for grocery shoppers. Changes in wholesale food prices usually show up in retail stores within a matter of weeks.

The 0.7-per-cent rise in wholesale prices last menth compared with an increase of 0.4 per cent in November and a rice of 0.8 per cent in October. During the summer, these prices had risen only mederately or not at all. In the December report the Labor Department changed the way it measures wholesale prices to provide what the department aid is a more reliable measure of inflation at the wholesale price level

The new method feauses on prices of finished goods, such as automobiles, furniture, farm equipment and food ready for sale in supermarkets.

In the past, the government measured wholesale costs by using the prices of goods in the various stages of the production pipeline —a system that often resulted in a duplication of price changes as a particular product was transformed from raw meterial to finished product. Last month, the finished goods index stood at 1855, meaning that it cost wholesalers $185.50 for the same goods purchased for $100 in the 1967 base period.

Commerce Department said, and follows a real increase last year

Without adjustment for inflation, the figures would be 10.1 per cent and 13.7 per cent, respectively.

Commenting on the expected decline in outlays, Mrs. Kreps said that 'quick enactment of a meaningful energy policy would sweep away a major area of uncertainty which currently is retarding business investments."

She added that the business and personal tax reductions that President Carter is expected to propose shortly "are essential to sustain consumer demand and give business the incentive to in-

Mrs. Kreps's statement did not mention a specific investment target. The administration has considered investment growth of from 8 to 10 per cent in real terms as needed to sustain strong general economic expansion.

The department said that companies participating in its annual survey of capital spending es-timated that their price increase for capital goods purchased in 1977 was 8 per cent and they expect a similar increase this year.

The department noted that while little is known about how respondents estimate price changes, their estimates have been generally higher than price rises as measured by a Commerce Department inflation index. Thet index showed prices for fixed nonresidential investment rose 5.5 per cent in 1977.

The department said manufacturing industries plan to spend $67.25 billion this year, up 10.4 per cent from $61.03 billion in 1977 before adjustment for inflation. Last year spending in that category rose 16.3 per cent. Durable goods makers' spending is slated to rise 11.7 per cent after a 19-3-per-cent rise last year while nondurable goods businesses plan a 9.2-per-cent increase after a 13.8-percent rise in 1977, before adjustment for

The man with exceptional goals needs an exceptional bank.

What makes Trade Development Bank exceptional? To start with, there is nur policy of concentrating on things we do unusually well. For example, trade and export financing, foreign exchange and bank notes, money market transactions and precious metals.

Geographically, too, we work mainly in areas where we have something special to offer. This includes the U.S.A. (our U.S. affiliate, Republic National Bank of New York, is now one of America's 60 largest banks). It also includes a number of countries which, frankly, many other banks lack the first-hand knowledge to tackle properly. What's more, we keep our back-office systems running abreast of our business. You don't notice this directly, but it shows up in quicker decisions and fewer errors. Serving our clients well has helped us grow uncommonly fast.

Today, we're big enough to provide most of the sophisticated facilities of the international banking giants but lean enough not to keep you . waiting for decisions.

As part of the Trade Development Bank Holding Group ($ 3.6 billion in assets; $ 327.4 million in capital and loan funds employed, as of June 30, 1977). we're ready to serve you in most of the world's financial centers.

Key Group offices: Geneva, London, Paris, New York (Republic National Bank of New York). Other offices in Beirut, Bogota, Buenos Aires, Caracas, Chiasso, Frankfurt, Luxembourg, Mexico City, Montevideo, Nassau, Panama City, Rio de Janeiro, São Paulo, Tokyo.

Trade Development Bank

Trade Development Bank (France) S.A., located at 20, Place Vendome, Paris, offers clients a full range of international banking services.

THE SECOND RING OF POWER

By Carlos Castaneda. Stmon & Schuster. 316 pp. 1995

Reviewed by John Leonard

WHEN we last heard from Carlos Castaneda, he was tumping off the top of a Mexican mountain into the abyss, where he had been reliably informed by his sorcerer-guru Don Juan, he would become "pure perception," bouncing back and forth like a Ping-Pong ball or a luminous egg between the "tonal" and the "nagual" realms of creation. He probably took his writing pad with him. He seems to have started out wanting to be Stanley in Africa and ended up as John Carter on Mars.

I should explain—before sophomores of every age all over America put this book onto the best-seller list, and before this review is accused by Don Juanistas of "lacking impeccability"that I choose to read " Teachings of Don Juan," Separate Reality," "Journey to Extlan" and now, "The Second Ring of Power" as anthropolog-ical fiction or anthropiction. Thus, Castaneda is not quite so funny as L. Ron Hubbard and not nearly so inventive as Frank

Herbert. The only other sensible way to read him is as perody, but Donald Barthelme has already done that, However: to be sensible, reason-able, rational and wordy is to be everything that Don Juan, or his amanuensis Castaneda, deplores. It is to be trapped in "the domain of the tonal" (the everyday), "the first attention" (the ordinary) and "the first ring of power" (average awareness). The "impeccable warrior," the master sorcerer, wearing two rings and two attentions, sometimes abetted by "allies" in a "perfect gourd" that must be "the size of the thumb of the left hand," goes through the door of the eye into

How does one get to be air impeccable warrior? Castaneda began by munching "psychotropic plants." It helps a lot to listen to Don Juan, a slyboots at paradox and dirty tricks. Don Juan is also very good at patching up the holes in your luminosity, although for true "complete you must re-equire the "edge" you gave away to your children. You must accept your fate, even while trying to change it, before losing your "form." You find yourself often taking off your clothes in a hard wind. The reader who fancies his playing skill should consider the position that arises in six spades after the opening lead of the diamond king and a shift to a trump. South wing in dummy and rufts a diamond, on which East completes a high-low signal. He leads a trump to dummy, finding that West begin with a singleton, and has to form a plan. He notices that East has completed a high-low signal, so he can assume that the remain-ing diamonds are with West.

It would seem that South must make winning guesses in hearts and clubs to bring home 12 tricks. But before testing that assump-tion, two points should be made about the bidding.

South had a difficult rebid after the response of two dis-monds to one spade. Two hearts with a strong three-card suit was as good as anything for he was prepared to play in a three-four fit if North raised, for diamonds ruffs would come in the short hand.

The spade suit, already known to be a five-carder, was totally inadequate for a second bid, while two no-trump would have suggested a balanced hand and three clubs would have shown extra values.

North's jump into Blackwood was risky, since he might have landed in a six-spade contract with two quick diamond losers. He had in mind a grand slam if South held the A-K of dismonds and the ace of clubs, for his partnership had a method of locating the diamond king at the six-level

The right play for South at the fifth trick, after two rounds of diamonds and two rounds of spaces as described above, was to finesse in clubs. There were two minor reasons and one major reason for this choice.

In the first place, West could hardly have both missing queens, since he had not made a takeout double of one spade. There would therefore be a tendency for East to have the club queen.

Secondly, the club I would bring home the si short order if East held Q-re-clubs, allowing four clubs But the major reason for club finesse is that if it sat the slam is home regardle the location of the other South can then lead a tru dummy, ruff a dismond will last trump, cash two club ners and cross to the hear The position would then be

Deflected Passes

He was alluding to Super Bowl V when two deflected passes resulted in two interceptions for the Baltimore Colts, notably a last - minute interception by Mike Curtis that positioned Jim O'Brien's last-play field goal in a 16-18 victory.

"The ball went through Dan Reeves's hands," he said of Cur-tis's interception. "But this is a lot different this time. That year I was being called the worst quarterback ever to come to the Super Bowl, that I was lucky to

A Foot Is Thrust in the Door of Baseball's Hall of Fame

By Red Smith NEW YORK, Jan. 12 (NYT) .-Voting for the Beseball Hall of Fame is in its last week, which means that in the immediate future there will be a marked increase in three kinds of letters in the daily mail. There will be letters soliciting votes for various candidates, letters asking why Churk Klein or Hack Wilson isn't enshrined at Cooperstown, andwhen this winter's returns are in _letters disagreeing with the voters' choices Some of the letters are strident and probably self-defeating. For example, there has been an aggressive campaign for Gil Hodges going on for several years now, insistent, hard-sell electionsering that may have turned off a good many voters who might otherwise have included Gil on their ballots. And afterwards, when the dissenters write, they seldom criticize the electors as prejudiced or incompetent or both. More often, they attack the unoffending player who has been chosen for beatification, vilifying him in terms usually reserved for triple ax

16 Choices Allowed

There is space on the ballot for 10 names, and a candidate must be mentioned by 75 per cent of the voters to achieve instant immortality. However, the ballot "Ocoh, that garbage," Hall fixed out in this polling place bears only four names—Eddie Mathews, Enos Slanghter, Duke Snider and Pee Wee Reese. It would not have been difficult to find reasons to support six more, but these four have been kept lottering on the doorstep far too long.

Nobody who followed the Brooklyn Dodgers of the 1950s would question the credentials of Suider and Reese. In those days, New York had three great center-fielders, and arguments about the comparative ability of Duke Snider, Willie Mays and Mickey Mantle caused more saloon fights than religion. Mantle is in the Hall of Fame and Mays will go in next winter after he has completed the required five years in quarantine. The swift and muscular Duke can no sooner be excluded from their company than he could be eliminated from those arguments.

Definitely the Leader

As for Pee Wee, he was a shortstop of the highest competence and the only leadoff batter in baseball who could maintain a lifetime average of .269, allowing himself only two strikes. (He invariably took the first pitch no matter where it was). Much more than that, he was the unquestioned leader of a team that had individual brilliance at eight On the honor roll of house

That leaves Mathews and Killebrew as the only mere mortals among the game's nine top homerun hitters. Killebrew, it must be confessed left something to be desired on defense. "He hasn't much range," they said when Harmon played third base, "but anything he can get to, he'll

That was in his second year in the National League, the Braves' first season in Milwaukee, and inhabitants of the Great American Cheeselands regarded him as the second coming of Babe Ruth. They did not suspect that the man who would break Ruth's lifetime record was a teammate of Mathews, playing m the outfield.

Director Stephen Garrett stands before heavily endowed Getty Museum in Malibu, Calif. Other U.S. institutions fear his 'competitive threat,' but Garrett says he will not try to corner the art market.

More Money for Art: A Getty Windfall

By Robert Lindsey

MALIBU, CAME INYTY. Posthumously, J. Paul Getty will be spending more money on art than anyone since the Medicis, perhaps more money than anyone ever did. And in the spectacular museum that he built here but never saw, his trustees have begun to decide how the money will be spent, in a way, they say, that will not disrupt world art markets.

When the oilman died at age 83 near London June 6, 1976, he bequeathed about $710 million. the bulk of his estate, to the J. Paul Getty Museum, an attimes controversial copy of a 1st-century Roman villa overlooking the Pacific Ocean here. By the time probate of Getty's will is completed in two years or so, museum officials say, the total legacy could be worth more than $800 million, in addition to earlier gifts of $45 mil-The museum's endowment will he almost six times larger than the $139.1-million endowment of the nation's wealthiest museum the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. It will yield an income estimated at about million annually, almost twice the budgets of the eight art and history museums of the Smithsonian Institution.

"Sizable Challenge"

"The money is rather extraordinary, indeed," said Stephen Garrett, a Cambridge-educated architect who, as museum direc-tor here, is making key decisions on how the huge windfall will be spent. "And it's going to be a fairly sizable challenge to spend it in a way that is productive, fruitful, and in a way that leads to other things happening, which it should." The museum has already made its first move. Using a courtapproved advance from the 4th-century Greek bronze statue at a price that Garrett hinted was $4 million to $5 million. It is believed to be the highest price ever paid in this country

The new wealth of what has been a relatively obscure West Coast museum has sent a few shivers through the art world, wonder if it will outbid them for the most prized art works that become available in the future. But Garrett, saying that he spoke for other trustees of the museum, including two of Getty's sons, said that the museum had no intention of overnaving for objects in the fashion of a Texas dirt farmer with an oil gusher suddenly on his hands.

Sharing Wealth

Museum planned to share some of its wealth with other metitotions, including some in the East that, he suggested obliquely, had in the past tended to look down their noses at a minor museum in a cultural backwash of California.

Richard Brown, director of the Fort Worth Museum, said that the availability of so much to one institution was, theoretically, a "competitive threat" to other institutions.

"But I think you can exag-gerate the problem," he said. From what I've heard, the Gettys say it is going to be reasonable and responsible. And they're going to have some of the same problems as other museums," including the problem of knowing just when major art works are available, and the need to authenticate them.

"For example, I just got back from Europe and saw some things that I'm interested in that I don't think they know are available." he said. state, it recently purchased a

The Critics

When the Getty Museum opened three years ago, some called its collection of old masters less than first rate, and one architecture critic asserted that the museum "outstrips any existing monument to expensive aggressive bad taste, cultural pretentions and self-aggrandizenent south of Hearst Castle." But other critics, including

Paul Goldberger of The New York Times, praised it, with some misgivings, as a functioning art .. with buildings that themselves were in some ways kind of architectural miss And most critics offered high praise for its collections of rench decorative art and an-

Whatever the critics' judgment, the museum seems to be a hit with the public; visitors must make advance reservations because of parking limitations. Interviews with people filing through its 38 galleries indicated that they liked both the museum's unusual setting and its collections.

ing, Garrett described what amounted to three principles the money will probably be spent in the Los Angeles area; the museum will collaborate financially and otherwise, with other museums in the United States and abroad; and every effort will be made not to distort the art marketplace. "We would like to be seen by other museums as a model of the way museums should behave," said Garrett, who was retained by Getty as an architectural consultant in 1968, helped supervise the construction here, and was appointed museum director after Getty's

New Facility

Garrett said that he foresaw a moderate expansion of the esent museum, but he said that a major new facility would probably have to be built elsewhere in the Los Angeles area because topographic conditions prevent much expansion. He said that the museum would also seek to help other institutions in the Los Angeles area

"Clearly, one of the concerns we have is to develop a museum or museums that can make a major contribution to Los Angeles and California," he said. "It is a fertile, inventive area, but in certain ways it is an unficult to think of some place that is more in need in terms of redressing the balance between East and West in cultoral resources.

"Having said that we will continue to bese ourselves in Los Angeles, I think we will be able to make a major contribution to the country as a whole and in time make contributions to museums elsewhere "

With its ample resources. Garrett continued, the Getty Mu-seum could help a museum in New York, for example, to buy an expensive art work needed to fill out a collection and then offer the piece as a loan. Or it could pay half the price and share exhibition privileges. "We have a great deal to benefit by collaborating with the East Coast," he said.

the museum's altruism was yet to be tested and perhaps would not be until it found itself bidding with other museums for a prise that might never be available again. "I suppose it's naive to pretend we are not in a real world," he said. "Perhaps it won't be easy,

Garrett acknowledged that but I think the respect we will get, and I hope we will get, is Titian, but will be born from how well we collaborate in all-
